In August 2017, I showed ElevatorVR at the Webvr Expo as well as a working version of my industrial simulation tool for arcades. The Machinarium 2 demo explains how to control and use the VR Tilt arcades as well as how it was implemented. About the Machinarium 2 demo: The Machinarium 2 demo is a VR-sample of the Machinarium-2. It explains how to control and use the VR Arcades as well as how it was implemented. Using a controller and a touchpad, you can steer a robot while it's only possible to be transformed to a fly. With the other controller button, the enemies can be stopped by the net. Also the game explains that the shield is a rocket to jump to an area with no enemies. ElevatorVR is the first multilanguage tutorial application for VR Arcades. The game explains the controller and button layout, but also gives you an altitude experience. ElevatorVR is exclusively for arcade operators. The Gamemaster can switch between the languages via a panel. Currently ElevatorVR is available in German, English and French. Additional languages will be added soon. Experience ElevatorVR in the high-resolution postapocalyptic CyperPunk scenario. Introduction I made the decision to make accurate collision on hands, and as a result I chose to have only single usable glove that is attached to a player input-1=right, and input-2=left. This was a good decision, but I immediately started to rethink about it because it was too simple, I wanted to be able to move my hands independently from each other as if it has 2 glove in it. I fiddled around with it a bit and finally I came up with this present, I would like to share how I came up with the basic architecture. If you plan for force feedback controller, I hope this article will be of use. Layering: The aim is to have something like in the image below. If you have seen this kind of structure, it could be done in a closed way. I tried to use the DOF of the webcam: To make this hack work we needed to measure time of video frames.To accomplish this, first we need to configure the mode of the camera. configure mode vfm After this we need to associate the cameras output with the graphics card pipe. set the_pipe game To debug the cam we can use the function cam_debug, it give us a neat visualization of the video frames. cam_debug 1 will show this neat visualization: You'll be able to see fps rate, mouse state and other cool stuff. The value from top left to bottom right of the image is: 0.25 fps = 1/50 Hz maximum Vsync. 1.12 frames per 1 second. use mouse to left or right side to scroll 2.25 fps = 1/50 fps - Vsync Use the cam_debug console in the source code to set fps: cam_debug fps 3-4: The next step is to have a bit more of control over our "glove". I decided to work on the operation of characters while affected by game logic. Determining collision from the character. To do this I need to determine if there's a mouse state and/or the stock left thumb press. 1. Mouse press: There is no mouse, so there is no gui. 2. Mouse

"PEP POP has been blown up by a bomb and is running away from the explosion. To survive, he is jumping between platforms and trying to hold on to a spinning propeller. Can you help PEP POP make it out of the level? Help PEP POP find the five trophies at the end of each level. Be careful, the levels are very challenging, so practice and be prepared to practice again and again!" "I think that just as an athlete is a different animal from a football player or a basketball player or a baseball player, so too is a coach," Saban said. "Just like a football player isn't going to be successful in the NFL in a situation that is totally different from what he is used to, so too is a football coach not going to be successful in the NFL where he has to go out and teach some different things to his team." Saban is going to be a head coach in the NFL, and the NFL is going to be different from college football. The only way he's going to succeed in the NFL is if Saban has a plan. Saban said that a plan for the position and the NFL was the one thing that made him successful during his career at Alabama. Saban will get a chance to prove that he has a plan for the position in New York. But before he takes that opportunity, he's going to prove that he has a plan for every position on his roster. making. ----- thematt Not to be a dick, but what happened to 50% of stocks over the last decade? Doesn't that affect the value of inversions at all? ----- harryf I'd love to see a breakdown by whether the companies are actually related or not. ----- FesMyThrow Buy Linkedin at 2210p/share. I'm buying all the other ones. It's going to be a fun ride. ~~~ PhantomGremlin That stock is insane. $300 billion market cap, 2210p/share = $7.7 billion. The largest carrier by far is United Airlines, with $51 billion market cap. Based on that comparison it looks like Linkedin is valued at 50% the size of United? Maybe I'm reading into this too much, but it looks to me like a company dumping cash into social media is overpaying for an
