Phelan visits Elmira to see seniors Jim Phelan, a man with enough accolades to fill an encyclopedia, was passing through the Elmira-Corning Regional Airport Monday, and naturally we asked him about this new facility. On second thought, we asked him if there was any truth to the rumors we've heard for the last couple of weeks. Not really. Just kidding. Sort of. But obviously, it would be wonderful if this $16 million hangar project did pay off in roughly a few months. The project was approved unanimously last month and was sponsored by Assemblyman Dan Kavalick. "When we first began designing this, we contacted the FAA about how to bring it in, in an environmentally friendly manner," Phelan said. "We're in the process now of getting the railings for the building on the outside, so it's basically ready to go." It's a good that the project is on schedule, although Phelan did say there are a few hurdles. "The FAA has placed some safety regulations on us," Phelan said. "Our director is there and he has to sign off on the hangar. This is the last step. He has to give the OK for us to move on." Phelan is referring to FAA requirements that a building couldn't be larger than 75 feet deep, with 14,000 square feet of usable space, and that it be no taller than 60 feet. "The FAA will have to certify it," Phelan said. "That could take another four to six weeks."
